CONSIDERATIONS

QUESTION,

Relating to the

SCOTS MILITIA:

OR, A

Review of the feveral Shires in NORTH BRITAIN; their Trade, Commerce and Principles of their Inhabitants.

The whole being

A Modern History of that ancient KINGDOM.

Interspersed with many curious ANECDOTES:

Among which,

A faithful Character of ARCHIBALD late Duke of ARGYLE.

By ANDREW HENDERSON, A.M.

THE SECOND EDITION.

Nec folem proprium, Natura nec aera fecit, Nec tenues undas, ad Publica munera veni. Ovid. Metam, lib. vi.

Printed for A. Johnson, Westminster-Hall.

(Price One Shilling.)

CHATTEIDER ATIONS ISTION, THE LEWIS KIND array and Irada, Commerce standadefrich to be been amoralist mist with tell not turk as 44 . 34.3 8017119 1. Dr. outst. 17-0 The second secon

Tiff

on

CONSIDERATIONS

ONTHE

QUESTION

Relating to the

SCOTS MILITIA.

A and Factions are striving to undo each other for the Publick Good, it may appear strange that one Part of the Kingdom should be precluded from the Trust and Considence reposed in the other; for if the Wisdom of the Legislature has found, that Natives are the most proper Defenders of their own Country, I cannot see why the Establishment of a Militia thro' Great Britain ought not B to be univerfal, fince the Principle of Self-Prefervation is equally strong and prevalent in all Mankind: No Person will pretend to say that Scotland can compare with England either in Richness of Soil, Extent of Trade, or Number of Inhabitants; yet every Man must acknowledge, that as the two Kingdoms have been ever joined by Nature, and are now happily united by Law, all Distinctions ought to be laid aside, and the Countenance given to the one ought to be extended to the other, especially when the Happiness, the Sasety, and Interest of the Whole are concerned.

Tho' the Inhabitants of North Britain are not fo rich and numerous as those in South Britain; yet their Properties are dear to them, and their Wives and Children must be dear also: Several of them have lost their All by the many Captures of Ships which the Enemy have fnatched up almost in Sight of the Harbours to which these belonged. The Desolation caused by such Casualties is better conceived than expressed: Many Families are reduced to Misery from a State of Affluence; and the Landlords of these, who cannot on many Accounts go abroad to Germany or to the Indies. who might be useful to their King, their Country, their Families, and to themselves, if employed in the Militia, are from some ill-founded Motive denied the Honour which the Scots fo loudly call for.

fi

T

r-

1-ıd

of

i-

t

y e

4

e

What Pity is it that any Interruption should be to the mutual Confidence so necessary toward constituting the Happiness both of King and of People? And that our young Monarch, who, from the general Tenour of His Conduct, seems rather willing to spare a City abounding with Inhabitants, provided there be found in it ten righteous Persons, than to withdraw his Confidence from many hundred thousands of People for the Sake of some Individuals? Sure such a Mark of Discouragement must proceed from some Cause, and perhaps slow either from a Desire of being seared, or from an Apprehension that if the People of North Britain were entrusted with Arms, these might soon be turned against him.

Tis admirably well observed by that peculiar Luminary * in the Reman Republic, that " Love " is the best Security of Power, whereas Fear is "the Producer of Hatred; as it is a false and " fhort lived Security, but Love and Benevolence " are firm even unto Death: In the Case of a " conquered People, I must confess, fays be, that " if nothing else will keep them in Order, I " should advise the same Rigour and Authority " to be exercised over them that a Master " uses over his Servants: But for any Man to " pursue the same Course in a free City, of " making himself feared, would be a direct " Madness; Men are more sensible of the Want " of Liberty than of the Enjoyment of it, The B 2 ^{*} Cicero de Off. lib. ii. c. 7.

"ready Way to the attaining of our Desires "either in public or in private Affairs, is to cast out Fear, and to preserve and maintain Charity." Hence he proceeds to illustrate his Argument by setting down the satal Catastrophe of some Potentates whose Empire was sounded on Fear and Partiality: Passions which could never enter into the Heart of our late Illustrious King, who wanted above all Things to adorn the Honours of his Reign with that perfect Glory, mentioned afterward by the incomparable Civilian, viz. "the Love, the Trust, and Reverence of the People;" which only "Gentleness" and Bounty are able to procure."

I am at a Loss by what Name to call the Conduct of the M—n—y in the Affair before us; a Militia is found necessary by a British Parliament, for resisting an Invasion, and yet the Country, whose extended Coast is wholly naked, must be denied any fort of Protection, except that which arises from the sew Troops that are in it, and which, considering the Distance of the Places of their Cantonment, could not be got to-

C

p

to je

th

ta

m

as

be

W

Ri

gether in several Days.

In this Place I cannot but express my Concern, that an Administration so universally applauded, should yet be tarnished with such Partiality? And that the memorable Year 1759, when Victory crowned the British Standards, in the sour Quarters of the Globe, should be stigmatized with such an Inconsistency? which if it proceeded from any sear of an Insurrection in savour of a

Pretender, why was not the same Exception made to Lancashire, Derby, Cumberland and Westmoreland? for the Chevalier's Standard was crowned with six hundred Adventurers from those Counties in the Space of six Weeks; whereas not above seven Thousand joined in Scotland, in the Space of nine Months, and of these three Thousand had come to him from Invernesshire before the Action at Prestonpans.

fires

caft

ha-

Ar-

of

on

ver

ous

orn

fect

ble

VC-

efs

on-

ore

ar-

the

ed,

ept

in

to-

n,

ed,

y ?

IC-

ur

ed

a

er,

Whence can the Partiality proceed? Sure it cannot flow from an Antipathy in the English Representatives, every one of whom is interested in the Preservation of the remotest County in the United Kingdom, being a Member of the great Community, which is to be confidered as one common Family under one common Head, who enlivens and invigorates the Whole: For if once a foreign Enemy was to fet Foot on Shore, every Man would be fomewhat anxious for his Property, which, in a short Time, may be exposed to Ruin and Desolation; the most wealthy Subject in the united Kingdom is concerned in the Preservation of every poor Man's Substance; and the Legislature has always considered it with the same Tenderness as their own, be it ever so distant from the Capital.

I am rather apt to imagine that the Difagreement among the Representatives from Scotland, as to the Method of raising the Militia there, has been the grand Obstruction; probably the Cavil was first started by one better acquainted with the Rules of the Court of Session in that Kingdom, the Acts of Sederunt there, and some of the many Questions that occur in the Assembly of the Kirk, than with the Geography of the Country, and Disposition of the Inhabitants: Perhaps the Oppofer, having been dandled upon the Knee of Prosperity, is insensible of the Losses which the Farmer, the Tradesmen, the Manusa durer, the Seaman, or Merchant, may fustain: Who doubts but Conceit and Ignorance supply his want of Genius, and that he was trained up in the obsolete Arts of Sophistry, to the neglect of substantial Learning, and a free Way of Thinking: Who denies but he possesses a rolling Volubility of Tongue, with all the Broadness of the Scots Accent; the former being natural to him, while the latter is confirmed by Practice, and increased by Affectation; he can skrew up his Shoulders, fold together his Arms, spread out his Legs one Way, turn his Head another, wink with the right Eye, gaze with the Left, and contract his Body to enforce his Arguments. In these favourite Attitudes, he has made Use of low Infinuations, chimerical Suppositions, and many false Mediums, for hindering his Countrymen from sharing the Confidence of the late King, in common with their Fellow Subjects.

The distinguished Patriot *, who gives Lustre to Dignity by his serene Deportment, adorns the Robes which he wears by his Moderation, who, by the Brilliance of his Virtues, commands

Respect

Re

reig

ma fon

bet Co

tha

the

bui

tio

No

Ge

M

the

fer

em

Clo

car

the

the

liai

wh

the

Wil

the

rea

Na

Pro

212 if a

^{*} Arthur Onflow, Speaker of the House of Commons.

ny

k,

nd

p-

of

he

he

bts

je-

ete

ial

ho

of

nile

fed

ers,

one

the

his

rite

ati-

alle

mon

omıftre

orns

ion,

ands

pect

S.

Respect from the august Assembly where he prefides, and who attracts the Admiration of Foreigners, by the striking Decorum which he maintains, can well remember a Time when fome of the Representatives from Scotland were better acquainted with the Geography of their Country, and the Disposition of the Inhabitants, than to oppose so salutary a Scheme. No one, the least acquainted with the Nature of a Militia. but must own that a Number of Men, proportioned to the Inhabitants, may be raifed as foon in North as in South Britain: The Noblemen and Gentlemen can have their annual or monthly Meetings at the Head Borough of every County; they can make out Lifts of fuch as are able to ferve; they can recommend the Officers to be employed; they can give in Estimates of the Cloathing and other Necessaries, and what they can furnish toward defraying the Expences of their feveral Corps. In a Word, they can peruse the feveral Articles laid down in the Act of Parliament for raifing a Militia in England, all which they can adopt in forming the same among themselves; and whenever any Difficulties occur, with respect to levying a suitable Expence for their Support, the Legislature will always be ready to lend an Ear to their Remonstrance.

The Question before Us is not, Whether the Natives of Scotland be included in the general Proposition laid down in the Act of Parliament, viz. the best Defenders of their own Country, or if a Militia can be raised there? or if it be for

the

I

C

le

al

W

Ė

OT

th

ne

an

On Co

th

fce

the

Ur. Ple

fre

Ać

cou

a I

Sov Do

opp

the Interest of the Nation that such should be levied? all which I take for granted: The Debate is whether it be consistent with the Sasety and Peace of the Government, that a Scots Militia be intrusted with Arms in Time of War, in which Light viewing the Matter, I shall endeavour to remove the salse Prejudices against the North Part of the United Kingdom, and flatter myself, that from what may be said, the Truth of what is asserted by the Convention of Boroughs, as to "a re national Militia being the best Security of this Majesty's Dominions," * will more fully appear.

If we take a View of North Britain, it may be ranged under four Divisions: The Eastern, which extends from Berwick upon Tweed to Edinburgh; the Western, which begins there, and passing along the Forth, reaches to the utmost Limits of Argyleshire; the Southern, which proceeds from Edinburgh to Solway Firth; and the Northern, which, according to some, extends from the Forth to the Orkneys; including a Track of Territory almost equal to the other three Di-

No Person acquainted with the Southern Divifion of North Britain, can deny but the Inhabitants are loyal and well affected: Nor do I believe that our young Sovereign has more faithful and more ^{*} Alluding to the grateful Return of Thanks sent by their Deputies to Mr. Elliet of Minte, and to the Letter appointed to be wrote to that worthy Patriot Mr. Ofwald of Dunnikeer, July the oth, 1760.

be

i be

hat

af-

" a

illy

nay

rn,

in-

ind

oft

ro-

the

nds

ick

Di-

vi-

bi-

eve

ind

ore

heir

eer,

loving Subjects, throughout the Circle of his extensive Dominions, Hanever itself not excepted: Scarce can one among a Thousand, moderately speaking, be found in these Parts in the least tinctured with Jacobitism: Out of the Shires of Roxburgh and Selkirk, which contain above one hundred thousand Inhabitants, only three were concerned in the Rebellion, two of whom were delirious, and the third, Mr. Ker of Graiden, was involved in it by Means of his Education in Spain, whether he had been sent from his Infancy. Out of Anandale was only one, which was owing to his being a Prisoner at Carlifle for Debt, when the Pretender came there: From Kircudbright, Wigtown, and Lanerk, were none; from the Shires of Berwick and Haddingtown were three; and from Peebles only two, as far as I could hear: All which Counties put together contain about fix hundred thousand Inhabitants, most of whom, tho' defcended from those who frequently encountered the Forces of the Kings of England, before the Union of the Crowns, can reflect with a fensible Pleasure that even in the midst of their Jarrs, frequent Intermarriages happened between them: Acts of Generofity and Politeness existed in these warlike Ages, which the Marshals of France could not go beyond; it was not uncommon for a Piercy to shelter himself from the Wrath of his Sovereign in the Castle of Douglass, nor for a Douglass to fly to the Castle of Almwick, when oppressed by Court Parasites too powerful for him.

CC

Vi

m

tr

fo

C

m

th

bi

D

Si

A

fo

10

no

br

K

Ever fince the Union of the Crowns the Borderers, both in South and in North Britain, have cultivated a daily Friendship; Intermarriages frequently happen among them; The Produce of either Nation, which, before that happy Period, could not be imported but under the severest Penalties, now abounds in the Markets of both: What Flocks of Sheep, what Herds of Black Cattle, and what Number of Horses are driven every Sammer into Newcastle, Durbam, Penrith, Hexam, Lancaster and Carlisle! And it is furprising to see the Numbers of People who crowd the Fairs of Jedburgh, Hawick, Kello, St. Bofwell's and Langbelm, from Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmoreland, Durbam, and the whole North of England, which is so blended with the Southern Parts of Scotland, that they are in a Manner one People: Many of them have the fame Pedigree, exercise the same Form of Religion, and deposite their Ashes in common Sepulchres: In a Word they are united in all the Bonds which the Roman Civilian * fo distinctly and amply describes, but particularly what he calls the most firm and noble Association; they are link'd together by a Correspondency of Manners, and a Freedom of Conversation! Which being the Case, why such Distinctions as to entrust the one Part with Arms, but not the other? Why should the People of Northumberland, which jutts in among the Southern Counties of Scotland, be entrusted with Arms, while the other, tho' con-^{*} Cicero de Off. lib. i. c. 17.

containing a Track of Territory, no less extended, nor less populous than Yorkshire and Westmoreland put together, are denied the Privilege? Such Distinctions may not only interrupt the Harmony between them, but sow such Seeds of Aversion as may in Time grow up into the former Antipathy.

Or-

ave

re-

of

od,

Pe-

h:

ick

ren.

th,

ur-

wd

0/-

m-

ole

he

a

he li-

11

he

tly

he

ey

rs,

ng

he

hy

ch

id.

10'

n-

Between the Southern and Western Division lies the Shire of Edinburgh, which, being the Place of public Resort, cannot be free from disaffected People; however, the Loyalists are the most numerous: The Gentlemen night he Metropolis are generally descended from those who acquired their Riches from practising the Law; so that their Well-being depends upon the present Constitution, since a Change of Government might, in all Probability, deprive them of what they enjoy. This County, including the City, contains about one hundred thousand Inhabitants.

From Edinburgh we may pass to the Western District, which contains the Shires of Linkithgow, Stirling, Dumbarton, Renfrew, Air, Bute and Argyle, the Inhabitants of which may be about four hundred thousand; and have been generally so remarkable for true Revolution Principles, that no People have endured more Hardships under a tyrannical Government than their Foresathers: The Clans, the Ancestors of those who lately appeared in Arms against the Government, were brought from the Isles and remote Places of the Kingdom, to live upon free Quarters among

ton

COL

Sh

Pre

of me

of

inc

kir

Inc

Fie

the

ma

tru

Br

Sou

fta

lan

Do

Gu

the

Par

to l

poi

non

Gla

beh

them *. Poor Countrymen were arraigned before the Criminal Courts for hearing a Presbyterian Minister. Fired with the Love of Liberty, and animated by the Dictates of a good Confcience, they took up Arms at the Revolution ; and it is observable, that a fingle Regiment, well known by the Name of The Cameronian, defeated a numerous Host of Highlanders at Dunkeld, about fourteen Days after their Victory at Killicranky: Had the Government at that Time refused to establish a Militia to these Parts. King William would have been obliged to have gone down in Person to Scotland, in order to check the Progress of the Disaffected. Nor must it be forgot that this illustrious Corps made a noble Stand at the Battles of Steenkirk and Landen afterwards. Why then discourage the Offspring of these generous Patriots? Why doubt their Fidelity? No Man, the least acquainted with human Nature, but must own that to be neglected by a Superior, who has all the Reason in the World to be satisfied with One's Conduct, is the ready Way to make a Friend an Enemy; for what Man would chuse to live in a Country where he is denied the common Privileges of his Fellow Subjects? Every Man loves Freedom and Encouragement, while a partial Conduct raises the Complaint mentioned in the Motto against the churlish old Man, who vitiously puddled the Waters, that La-

^{*} See M'Kenzie's Defence of the Reign of K. C. II.

tona's Children might not taste them, tho' a common Benefit.

beby-

ty,

n;

nt,

an,

at

nat

ts,

ve

ler

ed.

us

of

en

a-

n, ut.

or,

18-

to

ıld

he

8?

nt,

nt

ld

0-a's

Out of the most wealthy of the Western Shires there was not a fingle Man in the Pretender's Army: On the contrary many of them appeared in Defence of the Govern-And it is well known, that the Militia of Glafgow, Paifley, and Renfrew made no inconsiderable Figure at the Battle of Falkirk, where the King's Troops were, thro' the Inclemency of the Weather, obliged to quit the Field, and would have been cut in pieces had not the Argyleshire Militia secured their Retreat, by marching in the Rear. In a Word, there are not truer Patriots, nor more loyal Subjects in the British Dominions than are to be found in the Southern and Western Parts of Scotland; an Instance of which we shall give.

When the Pretender was retreating out of England, he halted with his Army at the Village of Douglass, and went in Person attended by his Guards to the Castle of that Name, possessed of the Notion, so frequent in the Mouths of his Party, that he wanted nothing to be admired, but to be seen: However at Douglass he was disappointed; for not a single Man joined him there, nor during his March from Solway Firth to Glasgow; and as for the Duke of Douglass, he behaved in a Manner every way worthy the Representative of his heroic Ancestours.

The first who came to him, found him in a plain Room and homely Dress, sitting before a

T

W

me

2730

ter

P

me

in

he

D

C

wi

the

fur

der

his

the

the

Bat

En

left

one

W

the

the ren Na

Quen Kin

that

from

Engl

Fire, near which was a Table, whereon were placed feven Silver Watches; on their entering, he faid, Do any of you want to take a Watch? and so touching one with his Fingers, he added, Take a Watch, take a Watch, bere is a Variety : Accordingly three of them took Watches, while others demanded his Money and his Arms: It is, faid he, not the Cullom of a Douglass to deliver up bis Arms; but what Cash I have about me shall be yours: So riffling his Pockets he laid down his Money * upon the Table; but this was foon fnatched up, and the Keys of his Cheft and other Repositories were loudly called for. No Keys, faid the Duke, I have, no Keys I will give; defire my Coufin Perth to speak with me. Accordingly Perth came in, attended by the principal Leaders, among whom were Locheol and Dr. Cameron. These understanding what had passed, began to make an Apology with their usual Politeness, by fetting off the Justice of their Cause; and even proceeded to remonstrate with his Grace upon the Glory that would accrue to his Family if he would join the righteous Heir to the Crown? Dont't tell me, replied the Duke, of Heirs and Pretenders, I might put in for my own Claim +:

* According to my Information 100/; twelve Pounds of which was in Silver.

[†] Anno 1370, at the great Parliament held in Lithgow for recognizing the Title of Robert Stuart, the first King of that Name, William Earl of Douglass claimed the Crown of Scotland, in Consequence of his Descent from King John Balliol: However the Matter was compromised in Consequence vere

ing,

ch?

ded.

ety:

t 15,

iver

me

nwo

oon

ther

lefire

ngly

ders,

n to

pon

f he wn?

and

1+:

Chen

nds of

of that

n of

Toba

Confe-

uence

Then, turning to Lockeol, he added these very Words, You, Sir, bave it in your Power to take me Prisoner, but you have it not your Power to make me affift or acknowledge any Heir or Pretender to the Crown: I lie under Obligations to no Prince, except to him who is fettled by Parliament upon the Throne, and to him I am bound by indissoluble Ties of Gratitude. Having so spoke, he retired with all the Dignity and Air of a Douglass. There was an universal Pause! The Chieftains look'd at each other, and being ftruck with the Resolution and Firmness of the Man, they not only defifted from troubling him any further, but faved his House from being plundered; however the Army drank plentifully of his Grace's Liquors, seized upon the Arms which they found, and among those the Sword which the great Sir James Douglass used at the terrible Battle of Bannockbourn, and at fixty-two more Encounters, including those in Spain and in Palestine; but whether from the Inability of any one Man in the Pretender's Army to weild the Weapon, which had contributed fo much to fix the Independency of Scotland, and to pull down the Followers of Mahomet; or from the Reverence which many of them bore to the venerable Name of its first Owner, certain it is, the Sword quence of a Marriage between his Lordship's Son and the King's eldest Daughter. Buc. Hist. lib. ix. Add to this, that his Grace is descended in a direct Line of Heirs Male from Margaret Tudor, Daughter to King Henry VII. of England.

was fent back and deposited in the Place from whence it was taken.

fel

tru

U

W

m

rar

the

ver

up

we

fou

his

 \mathbf{Bil}

the

died

forr

and

mar

con

fect

Kni

who are e disti

Strai

Cou

duit

in pr

mest

publ

tourt

Tho' we cannot say so much for the Loyalty of the Inhabitants in the Northern Division, yet I cannot see a good Reason why these should be exempted from partaking of the Encouragement and Considence with which the King, by the Advice of saithful Counsellors, may be brought to honour the other Parts of the Country: And tho' I cannot be of Opinion, that the Shire of Pife, so remarkable for her Martial Heroes of Old, and her industrious Inhabitants at this Time, is a Part of the North Division, yet I must begin with it, as it is the first County that occurs after passing the Forth.

The Shire of Fife, in Proportion to its Extent. is fully as populous * as any in England, Middlefex only excepted; it abounds with all the Necessaries of Life, and enjoys many natural Advantages. Here are inexhaustible Mines of Coal, and Pits of Salt: Of these the Fordel Coal is the most entire and cleanly, and burns brighter than the best Newcastle Coal. Their Coast abounds with White and Shell Fish, many of which are transported to foreign Markets. In this County are eight Earls, three of whom are at this Time among the Representatives of the Peerage of Scotland, viz. the Earls of Rothes, Morton, and Murray; the former of whom has by his many generous and noble Actions in Germany, Spain, and in Ireland, endeared himfelf

^{*} It contains about Two Hundred Thousand Inhabitants.

om

ral-

on,

uld

ge-

by

be

un-

rtial

ants

ion,

inty

ent,

Mid-

the

tural

s of

Coal

hter

Coast

of

In

are

the

thes,

n has

Ger-

himfelf

ants.

felf to the Soldiers, whose Father he may truly be called. He detected the Iniquity of the Usurers in Chelsea Hospital, who, increasing in Wickedness, defrauded the Pensioners out of more than half their Income. It was no rare Thing to see the King's Soldiers lying in the Streets, exposed to all the Hardships of Poverty, while these Blood-suckers were feasting upon what the Munificence of Parliament so well intended for the Poor. The Earl of Rothes found one of these Objects, and examining into his Case, he was so active in the Matter, that a Bill was brought into Parliament for abolishing the inhuman Practice.

Nor is it long fince two other Representatives died, viz. the Earls of Crawford and Leven, the former of whom added Lustre to his Profession; and from a long Experience acquired in the German, Muscovite, Sardinian, and British Armies, contributed to render the Art of War more perfect than it had been before; the Number of Knights and Gentlemen is very great, many of whom of large and confiderable Fortunes; they are descended from a Race of brave Men, whose distinguishing Characteristic was Hospitality to Strangers, Resolution in the Field, Sedateness in Council, Fidelity to their Sovereign, such Assiduity in the Affairs of State, as if never concerned in private Matters, and such Application to domestic Occurrences, as if never taken up with public Business. And besides in this County are fourteen Royal Boroughs, and a Multitude of large large and populous Villages, many of whom among the best and most opulent in the Nation.

If such be the Condition of this flourishing County, where are very large Woollen, Linnen, and Iron Manusactories; and that it is exposed to an invading Enemy, as much as any one Part in England: How hard to deny them the Use of Arms?

Should a Foreign Enemy come up to this County with five or fix Ships of the Line, and fifty Transports, each carrying an hundred Men, and land in any of the Places upon that Coast, which they might do, if no Shipping was near to prevent them: All the Manufactures of Linnen, and in Cloth, might be carried off in a few Hours, and these of Iron might be thrown into the Sea; the fcanty Troops in the County might foon be dispersed; the Gentlemens Houses would quickly be plundered of their valuable Plate and Furniture; the rich Mines of Coal and of Salt, with the prodigious Repositories of Lime, would be burnt and destroyed; and the Possessors be obliged to fly to the other Side of the Forth, as they did in the memorable Year 1745: For at that Period, no fooner was the News of the Pretender's Arrival at Blair confirmed, than General Preston, an Officer whose Name is well known in the History of the Wars of Queen Anne, repaired to his Post as Governor of the Castle of Edinburgh; his Friends and Relations packed up their Plate and Jewels, and fent them to that Fortress, while

they

18

li

di

b

be

re

tu

th

fn:

ad

Se

Ser

Ad

Ad

his

im

and

Red

ther

of I

при

diffe

fix (

one i

Regi

ing a

m

the

ing

en,

to

t in

Ufe

this

and

len,

aft,

r to

nen,

ours,

Sea;

be

ckly

rni-

with

d be

liged

v did

Pe-

der's

eston,

the

ed to

urgb;

Plate

while

they

they themselves * retired before a Parcel of Men. whom their Forefathers would, at the Head of their own Tenants, have foon destroyed; and it is my real Opinion that if there had been a Militia in Fife, a small Part thereof would have soon dispersed the little Army which the Adventurer brought with him; And it is hard that now, after being Sufferers in their Property by the Infurrection of Men, whose Ancestors were the Difturbers of the Repose of the Kings of Scotland, they should be still left open as a Prey to be fnatched at by an invading Enemy. I shall only add, that the whole Sea Coast is a Nursery of Seamen, many of whom have grown old in the Service of the Government; two of them are Admirals at this Time, viz. Lord Colvil and Admiral Holborn, the former of whom has, to his many Services, added that of relieving the important Fortress of Quebec on the 17th of May, and of finishing the Conquest of Canada, by the Reduction of Montreal, on the 8th of September Add to this, that beside the Number thereafter. of Hands employed in the Coal-Mines, there are upwards of 20,000 Men who have bore Arms in different Regiments.

At the breaking out of the last Rebellion, were fix Generals, and at this Time there are four; one of whom, General Robert Anstruther, whose Regiment had as considerable a Share in conquering and saving Quebeck, and in procuring Montreal,

^{*} Sir Robert Henderson, Sir George Prestoun, Sir Philip and Sir John Anstruther, &c. &c.

treal, as the Highlanders themselves *. How ungenerous then to deny these People the common Favours bestowed upon their Fellow Subjects? But passing from Fife we come to the County of Forfar, where, as in the former Shire, is the best Convenience for carrying on Trade and Commerce with the Baltick and the North of Germany, and as these increase, Disaffection ceases in Proportion: The Soil of the Country is generous and free, and the Fisheries are inexhaustible: The Ground is as fit for producing Hemp, Flax, and the Materials for Linnen Cloth, as any Part in Poland or Muscowy; and in manufacturing Linnen Cloth, they equal the Dutch themselves, their Materials being fully as good, and their Convenience of Water, and bleaching Greens, is far from being less.

These distinguishing Advantages slow from the very Source which renders them an easy Prey to an invading Enemy: Every Person knows that the Hazard Sloop was taken by a French Man of War off Montrose, December 1, 1745. The Enemy even landed in some Places, and plundered the Inhabitants: Had a Malitia been at that Time upon the Coast, no Enemy would have landed, nor would the Town of Montrose have been annoyed by them.

I own that in these Parts the People are generally averse to Presbyterian Church Government; but that is no Reason why they should be Enemies to His Majesty King George: The Gentle-

P

fe

be

O

the

in

Ca

du

in

of

Tra

me

Pole

^{*} See General Murray's Letter to Mr. Pitt.

WC

mub-

the

ner

on

the

Dif-

the

ries

oro-

in-

vy;

qual

and

the

y to

that Man

745.

and been

ould

ntrole

gene-

nent;

Eneentlemen men of Property are to a Man well affected: Their noble Representative the Earl of Panmure has always acquitted himself as worthy the Trust and Confidence of his august and illustrious Sovereign. And as an Instance of the Peoples Loyalty, they were so far from joining the Corps of 600 Men, which landed with Lord John Drummond from France, on the 30th of November 1745, that they facilitated the Escape of many Deferters, and withdrew their Horses from the Sea Coast, that these might not be employed in transporting the Cannon and Baggage of the Enemy: They withstood the Orders that were issued out under Pain of military Execution, nor did any join Lord Ogilvy, except a few of the poorer Sort, under Pain of being burnt alive in their own Habitations. I might have shewn from feveral Places in the Seots History that the Coasts both of Fife and the Shire of Forfar has been attempted by a foreign Enemy; witness the Obelisk erected in the Parish of Aberlembo, upon the Spot where Camus, the Danish General, fell in the great Battle between him and Malcolm Canmore: Other Instances might also be produced, but 'tis needless when Examples are fresh in our own Memory. In a Word, the People of this County have imbibed fuch Notions of Trade, that they would rebel against no Government: However no Men are more ready to oppose an invading Enemy, since the bad Behaviour of the French, who landed with Lord John Drummond, has tended to inflame them.

Though the Counties which lie beyond the E/k, the Northern Boundary of the Shire of Forfar, may be branded with Disloyalty, as the Bulk of the Rebels in the Years 1715, 1719, and 1745, came from those Places, yet the Times are changed: The Families of Distinction, who were Abettors of the Pretender's Cause, are now no more. The Earl of Marshal is no longer a Friend to his Claim; for his Lordship has been lately restored to the Favour of his late Sovereign, thro'

ta

Ca

vi

St

CI

Y

ful

aln

Re

his

ber

Ha

wh

dee

tha

the little

the Interceffion of the King of Prussia.

The Family of Gordon, by far the most powerful in the North of Scotland, are entirely altered in Principle, and are now, through the Pains and Industry of the deceased Henrietta, Dutchess of Gordon, Daughter to the Earl of Peterborough, become Protestant: The different Parishes, which at the Revolution were planted by Clergymen from the Southern Parts, are now supplied by the Sons of Natives in the Country; so that the Principles of Loyalty and Affection are infenfibly spreading through the different Parts of these extensive Jurisdictions. Add to this, that the Inhabitants along the Coasts of Buchan are growing rich by tasting the Sweets of Industry, arising from the Manufacturies erected among them. In a Word the Families of Diftinction, who were Nonconformists, are entirely removed from these Parts.

But to proceed a little Northward: Is not the whole ada

ifk,

ar,

of

45,

are

no

end

tely

ro'

al-

tta,

ot

rent

nted

won

try;

Parts

this,

chan

In-

ected

Dif-

rirely

t the

phole

whole County of Bamff in the Hands of Gentlemen remarkable for Loyalty, and who have ferved the Government faithfully in the worst of Times: No Man alive will doubt the Loyalty of the Earls of Finlater and Fife, of General Abercromby, and others whom we might name: Nay the last Rebellion, tho' it began in Scotland, is a sufficient Proof of the Loyalty of the People; for in the whole Kingdom not above 7000 Men, out of one Million five hundred thousand Inhabitants, were engaged in it.

After croffing the Spey, we enter into a County where Disaffection has greatly diminished; nor can a Place be found in the whole Northern Division where are more Enemies to the House of Stuart, than in the Shire of Murray.

The first Disgust against that Family arose from the pulling down the noble Fabrick of the Church at Elgin by the Earl of Buchan, in the Year 1347; when this, by far the most beautiful and stately Ornament in the Kingdom, I had almost said in Britain, was ruined thro' private Resentment, occasioned by a Dispute between his Lordship and the Bishop of Murray: Numbers of other Incidents tended to inslame that Hatred; and now the Gentlemen of Property are wholly in the Interest of the Government, as indeed they were Anno 1715; and it is observable that a Part of their Militia retook Inverness from the Rebels in that memorable Year.

What is faid of Murray may be applied to the little Shire of Nairn, a Place extreamly well

fituated

situated for Trade, and very improvable from its

tl

N

0 fo

St

M

be

ral

W

wl

the

Lil Mi wh

Fa

hay

Th

be

nor

Tra

the

Die

bau

natural Advantages.

To Nairn joins the Shire of Inverness, by far the largest, but by far the thinnest inhabited of any in Scotland *. It is divided into different Districts, or Hundreds, and of Old was parcelled out among the Clans §, who are either greatly diminished in their Number, or much curtailed in their Property; and many of the Natives are at this Time out of the Country, and may serve as Hostages for the good Behaviour of those left behind.

These Adventurers have been the happy Instruments of procuring the most substantial Advantages, and contributed as much as any Corps in the King's Army towards obtaining the Laurels which adorned the Temples of our late Sovereign in the Years 1758 and 1759. Did they not behave with uncommon Gallantry at Louisbourg? Did they not assault Camps, and storm Armies

* There is in it but one Royal Borough, a small Village, and about 30,000 Inhabitants.

Strathspey and Glenmorisson, the Residence of the Grants; Badenach of the Macphersons; Lochabar of the Camerons, and the M'Donalds of the Families of Keppoch, Glengary and Glenco; Appin of the Stuarts; the Aird and Stratherrick of the Frazers: Strath Glass of the Chisholms; Strath Nairn of the M'Intoshes, and the several Branches of the Catti; Slate, Glenely, and the life of Sky, is the Habitation of the chief M'Donalds, the M'Kinnons and M'Queens; the Island Lewis belongs to the M'Kenzies; Harris to the M'Cleods; North and South Urst to the M'Donalds of Clanronald's Family; and Barra belongs to the M'Neils.

the Climate, and the Sword at Guadaloupe and Martinico? Did they not climb up Rocks and Precipices at Quebec, when it fell into the Hands of the English? Did they not perform Prodigies of Valour at the unfortunate Battle of the 28th of April, 1760, when they dyed their Swords in the Blood of their Enemies, and were only fought down by the Saperiority of Numbers, affisted by the Regiment of Rousfillon?

its

far

of

ent

led

led

are

rve

eft

ru-

an-

in

ign

berg?

nies

at

age,

ints;

and

ck of

n of

chief

ewis

Jorth

ally ;

Tis true, these Class, except the Grants of Strathspey, who embraced a Neutrality, and the M'Leods of Harris, were in the unfortunate Rebellions that stigmatize the Scots Nation in general; but then it is to be observed, that the Crime was but slight as to them, since they were under a tyrannical Vassage to their Superiors, from which by the Wisdom of the Government they are now entirely freed. And since their Liberty, have they not attoned as much as Men can do for their Offences? Many of those who thro' Blindness stood upon the Fields of Falkirk and Culloden, in Opposition to his Majesty, have fallen in foreign Climes in his Service.

'Tis a Maxim founded in the Nature of Things, that after Punishment no Offence should be named, no Resentment should continue of it; nor should the immediate Descendants even of a Traitor be precluded from enjoying any Offices in the State: This was expressly declared by the Diet of Sweden after the Death of Count Lewenbaupt and General Budenbroke, Anno 1743; and about five Years ago, after the Execution of Count Eric Brahe for High Treason; and ought to be adopted in the Case of the Offenders in North Britain. The King's Forces have had their Will of the Infurgents: The Law has taken off the Ringleaders: Many of the inferior Sort have perished by Vermin on Shipboard; and others have met Death upon Scaffolds and Gibbets in all its ghaftly Attire. The Conduct of the Cumberland Jury is not forgotten at Carlifle; where the Tenderness, nay the Advice of the Judges * was scarce able to restrain their Havock: A lively Idea remains of the flaming Sword of Justice which ovrtook the Prisoners at Southwark, notwithstanding the Indulgence and Mercy of Lord Chief Justice Willes, and the other Judges: The parrow Escape of Sir James Kinloch and his Brother, may have made full as deep an Impression as the Executions of Hamiltoun, Wedderbourn, or Townley: The Case is too finglar to be passed over :

E about

e

to

no

Be

th

kr

Li

the

ma

ha

in

to pel

Tim

Lan

These Gentlemen had been arraigned before the ordinary Jury, but as the Case promised to be long, and that the Court was weary, the Trial was put off 'till next Day, when the twelve Judges of England sat upon the Indictment, and another Jury was called, the former being discharged. The Council for the Prisoners moved against ^{*} Lord Chief Baron Parker, Mr. Justice Wright, Mr. Justice Burnett, Mr. Justice Dennison; all Gentlemen of the utmost Lenity, Moderation, and Temper.

nt

be

th.

ill

he

eve

its

and

en-

was

ely

tice

ot-

ord

The

Bro-

Tion

, or

ffed

fore

o be

Trial

velve

and

dif-

oved

ainft

Vright

tlemen

against the Legality of arraigning them before any other Jury than that which at first was charged with them. The Opinion of the Judges was given, and Mr. Justice Wright differed from the Whole; for his Judgment was that no other Jury had a Power to try the Prisoners except that before whom they first were called. However, his Opinion was over-ruled; the Prisoners were tried, cast, and condemned, but such Tenderness was shewn that the Sentence was never executed.

Since the Sword of Justice hath been sheathed, every Thing has been done for establishing that Conflitution which the Rebellion was intended to subvert; the most wholesome Laws have been provided against any future Insurrection, and the People are no longer under that flavish Vasfalage to their Chieftains, which drowned them in Ignorance, fettered them with the strong Chains of Bondage and Oppression, and irrecoverably sunk them in an Abyss of Misery and Want; they know that they are free *, and fenfible of that Liberty which their Ancestors never dream'd of, they have already evidenced their Gratitude by a manly Exertion of the Arms with which they have been entrusted. Nay it is observable, that in the last Rebellion the Chieftains were obliged to use all their Authority before they could compel their Vassals to take up Arms in the Preten-E 2 der's

There was an A& of Parliament in King James the VIth's Time for abolishing the Vassalage, but as the People knew no Language but the Erse, so they were ignorant of it.

der's Service. Was not the bloody Cross sent among Lord Lovat's Dependants, and yet not above one third Part of these could be brought into the Scheme? And if the People discovered such Aversion at that Time, what may not be expected from them now?

What is faid of Inverness may in some Degree be afferted of Ross-Shire, and the little County of Cromarty; where the Friends to the Constitution are equal at least to that of her Enemies. In many Places are Men, nay Families, of true Revolution Principles, and whose Services have been oft'ner than once acknowledged by our late most gracious Sovereign.

The People of Sutherland, tho' very poor, are yet abundantly loyal; nothing is to be apprehended from that Quarter, nor yet from Caithness, a Shire so fertile in all the Conveniencies of Life, and so replete with whatever is fit for Man, that they have no Thoughts of altering their own Condition, which can hardly be better than it is.

Having thus given a general Sketch of the Country, I cannot pass from the Subject without observing that the Militia in the different Parts of Scotland, besides those who appeared in Arms at the Battle of Falkirk, were of the greatest Advantage; a Party of these seized at Dumfries upon thirty-four Waggons loaded with Baggage belonging to the Pretender's Army in their Way to England: The Militia of the Shire of Dumbarton mustered in Arms for the Royal Cause. The several

t

t

d

e

ee

ty

ties.

uc

ave

ate

are

-910

itb-

s of

Man,

their

than

f the

thout

rts of

ms at

-bA f

es up-

ge be-

Nay to

barton

The

feveral Gentlemen of the Name of Smollet, Napier, and Graham, espoused the same Interest. The Usefulness of the Country People was every where apparent; for no fooner did the Regular Forces fet Foot in Scotland than the Farmers for thirty Miles round brought in their Horses to help them out in their March, and to ease them of their Fatigue. Did not a considerable Number from among the twenty independent Highland Companies raised by the Care of the Lord President of the Session, march in the very middle of Winter to fight the French Invaders, and fuch as joined them, under the Command of Lord Lewis Drummond, Son to the Earl of Melfort, who had long been an Exile in France? And did not the Militia of Strathnavern give the first Blow to the Pretender's Cause? Did they not seize upon the Hazard Sloop, when loaded with Arms and Ammunition for the Chevalier's Party? Did they not in a Body attack the Crew, and fuch as were with them, while on their March with the Money to the Camp of the Adventurer? Was not the late unfortunate Earl of Cromarty taken with his Son, and the whole Body of his Forces dispersed on the Day preceding the Battle of Culloden by a Party of the Militia; and now these Men are to be denied the common Privileges of their Fellow Subjects? I have only to add, that the People in the North Highlands are at this Time strict Professors of the Religion of the Church of Scotland, it being no new Thing to fee as great a Multitude upon the Occasion of a Sacrament, as sometimes attends Master White-field in Moorfields, or Mr. Wesley at Oxford, or at the Tabernacle by Newpore Market.

But leaving these Considerations, an Incident lately happened, if it may be called an Incident, which more than any other may render the Government extreamly easy from any Apprehensions of a Rebellion in that Quarter: The Matter is too much to the Honour of an illustrious Person to be passed over in Silence, and as it is one of the finest Anecdotes in the Scottish History, so we shall trace out the same.

From the earliest Period of Time in the Records of Scotland we find that a Castle was always looked upon as absolutely necessary at Inverne/s; and accordingly it continued upon one Spot 'till the Time of Oliver Cromwell, who blew up that Fortification, and built another nearer the Habour; still holding it as a Maxim, that a Fort was absolutely necessary there: At the Restoration Oliver's Fort was razed to the Ground, the old one was rebuilt, and continued to be augmented with many Outworks and Conveniencies, at a vast Expence to the Government, particularly in the Years 1732 and 1733, 'til the 18th of March 1746, when Major George Grant, Brother to the Chieftain of that Name, did, in Opposition to the Voice of the Garrison and of the Gunner, surrender it into the Hands of the young Chevalier, who ordered the Works to be blown up directly.

C

1

ne

2

After the Battle of Culloden, His Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland visited the ruined Works, and expressing His Surprize that a Fort should be built on a Spot commanding no Pass nor navigable River, and in all Respects void of the feveral Advantages that ought in the Nature of Things to constitute a Fortification, he preferred the Place which old Oliver had fixed upon : However the Magistrates would not dispose of this small Parcel of Ground *, but at a Price which might be fufficient to purchase the whole Town. His Highness rode out with his Engineers, and took a View of the Coast; fo getting over the false Maxim that a Fort was absolutely necessary at Inverness, he judged, and very truly, that if a Fort was built near it, the same might be more for the King's Service. He had not rode above eight Miles till he came to a Point of Land called Arderseir, which lies opposite Rosomarkney in Rossshire: Between these Places is a Gutt, two Miles over, which begins at the great Sea that spreads between the Coast of Norway and Scotland, and propagates itself for twelve Miles without making a good or fafe Harbour, except at the Place where the Inlet begins. The Proprietor of this obscure Place, Mr. Campbell of Calder, was more docile than the Magistrates of Inverness, and made a Present to his Royal Highness of that large Piece of waste Ground, near the Point, which scarcely yielded Pasture for a few Sheep in the Summer Season. All of a fudden

er

It scarcely contains one square Acre.

Sudden five Hundred Men were set to Work; Architects, Masons, Joyners, and Labourers were employed; and while the former were building the Fortress, which was contrived by his Royal Highness, who superintended the Plan of it, the latter were occupied in cutting a Canal from the Sea to the Gut quite round it; so that the Fortress, which is a Square regularly flanked, and strengthned by all Kind of Outworks, is a perfect Island, defended by a deep wet Ditch toward the Country; and on the Wings and Front by the Sea, which last constitutes a Harbour where the largest Ships in the World may lie with Safety.

Without the Ditch a large and populous Village is built, and many confiderable Merchants have fettled in it for the Conveniency of Trade and Commerce. A Road has been cut from Perth to that Fort, which is full thirty Miles nearer than that known by the Name of General Wade's Road to Inverness, the whole Country is enriched by it; the Barracks can contain fix thousand Men, and in its present Situation is as capable of holding out a Siege as any one Fort in

What Man alive could have thought, about twenty Years ago, that the solitary Place Arder-feir would have put on so gay and so brilliant an Aspect? Had a Genius told the People in that Neighbourhood of the wonderful Change, they would, like the Ghost of Eneas, have been delighted with the Prospect of what was to come;

Europe.

and

th

and have been overjoyed to think that a beautiful Structure, nay a Town, worthy of being called by the Name of their Sovereign *, should arise among them.

r

C

d

0 n

ı-

as in

ut

7-

an

nat

de-

ind

I have long been of Opinion, that every Man, possessed of an Estate, ought narrowly to search after what might be of public Utility: The Britifh Parliament now give the utmost Encouragement to fuch Enquiries; many large Heaths, Commons, and waste Grounds, have been improved within these few Months throughout England: To pry into the Conveniencies of what is within a Man's Cognizance, and is included within his own Property, is a Duty incumbent upon every Person of Fortune; it is what he owes to his King, to his Country, and to his God: Every generous Breast has considered such Searches as Actions of the noblest Kind, the Fruit of an elevated Genius, Fellow Citizens have honoured them with Wreaths of Encomium, and adorned them with the civic Crowns of Applaufe, Cicera has preferred the Founders of Cities to the greatest Conquerors; and to the Honour of the Shire of Fife, a County as capable of supporting a Militia as any in Scotland, and as much exposed to an Invasion as any in South-Britain: the Proprietors there have traced the Advantages pointed out by Nature; an Instance of which I shall give.

A Gentleman in the Neighbourhood of the Earl of Morton's Seat, and possessed of an inex-^{*} Hec tum nomina erunt, funt jam fine nomine terre.

haustible Coal and Salt-Work, found out an obfoure Place, at which, however, Nature had formed a beautiful Inlet of the Sea, and a Depth of Water sufficient to contain the largest Ships; he purchased the Ground from its Proprietor, erected a Pier at his own Expence, and built Houses near it: The Harbour being finished, many People came to settle in the Place; so that now it has reared its Head, and forms a more accessible and safe Retreat to Vessels in stormy. Weather, than that of the Royal Borough Innerkeithing, in its Neighbourhood.

The Gentleman is the lineal Representative of a very antient Family, whose Bravery has been displayed in foreign Countries, whose distinguished Merit has shone in several Reigns, and whose Loyalty remains untainted: Many of its Branches have been regaled in Sweden, Denmark, Germany and France; nor is he himself the unworthy Son of fuch famous and renowned Anceftors; for abstracting from the most amiable Disposition, and the most endearing Generosity of Heart, he has had Eyes to see what lay hid from Ages; Goodness to improve it to the best Advantage; and a Spirit to carry it into Execution for the public Utility: He has built a Harbour at a Place * which had not a Name! and future Ages will gratefully remember the Man who did fo much for preventing Shipwrecks, and for faving a Number of Lives.

H

^{*} Now called Copernaumi

If fuch be the Condition of the Country in general, if the Inhabitants of the Southern Parts be loyal to a Man; if the People of the Western Division, and of the Shire of Fife, be almost so; and if Disaffection has ceased in the Northern District; if the Principal among the Nobility can treat the Abettors of the Pretender with Contempt, and in the Midst of Danger, I had almost said the Jaws of Death, express the Sentiments of a great Soul, which never Roman could outdo; if the Gentlemen of Property lay up a Fund of Satisfaction in their own Breafts, and intail a Bleffing upon their Posterity, by studying the Publick Good, why fuch Discouragment? Why put a Sword in the Hands of Foreigners for wounding the Scottish Nation and Name? A Name admired at Home for Fidelity, regaled in every Clime for Strictness of Discipline, and dreaded for Intrepidity, the greatest of Foreign Potentates having committed their Palaces and Persons to the Protection of a Scots Guard.

S.

. . .

C

d

R

1-

r-

d ın

bi

If

It is a Maxim founded in the Nature of Things,' that no Country can be too fecure in Time of War; and that when any Thing remains undone towards finishing a political System, every wise Man ought to think that nothing as yet is done. The denying a Militia to Scotland is a direct undoing of all that has been done; 'tis a Contradiction to the Act of Parliament as it stands, and which was formed in Consequence of a Conviction, that a "well ordered and well disciplined "Militia is essentially necessary to the Safety, F 2

"Peace, and Prosperity of this Kingdom." If the Government really thinks an Invasion practicable, pray what Sasety can there be while near one Half of the United Kingdom is left exposed; and what Peace or Prosperity can be expected, where Cause of Murmuring is given, and partial Destinctions are made?

The Security of England from an Invasion by Foreigners, was what the Government proposed by establishing a Militia but how South-Britain can be secured, while North-Britain is left open. is a Mystery to me: If indeed the former was separated from the latter by a Channel, as Ireland is from Great-Britain, or by a Strait, as Zealand is from Schonen by the Sound; or if a navigable River run between them, as the Wefer does between Westphalia and Hanover, or as the Thames flows between Middlefex and Surry, Effex and Kent; or even as the Humber divides Lincolnshire from Yorkshire, the Mystery would disappear; but the Case is otherwise; for tho' the Tweed divides South and North-Britain at Berwick, and the Efk separates the two Nations at Solway Firth, yet there are many Parishes, many great Estates, nay whole Counties, that lie on the South Side of the Tweed, belonging to Scotland, which for many Miles is as close to England as Kent is to Surry, Surry to Hampshire, or Kent is to Suffex; fo that in many Places a hundred thousand Men can march out of the one into the other, without the least natural Obstruction: 'Tis true Scotland does not lie so near France as the extended Coast from

from Dover to the Land's End; but then the Scots Shore is more contiguous to Denmark and Sweden, and confequently more liable to an Invafion from the Swedes and Russians, who are now the Allies of our natural Enemy; and it is observable that when J. Murray of Broughton went to Paris in the Year 1742, with a Copy of the Affociation for bringing in the Pretender, the old Cardinal Fleary proposed that the Invasion; in Favour of the Scheme, should be made by a Body of Swedes; for, as these are a Protestant People, faid his Eminence, they are more likely to give lefs Offence to the British Nation than a Body of Catholics are *. Add to this, the English Coast is defended by many Forts and Garrisons; whereas on the Scottist Coast there is not a Fort of any Strength or Consequence, except Fort George at Arderseir; nor is an Invasion from Foreigners intirely chimerical; witness the dreadful Defeat of the Norwegians at Largs, in the Shire of Renfrew; of the Danes at Kinloss, in the Shire of Murray; at Lancartie, in Perthsbire; at Kingborn, in the County of Fife; at Aberlemno, in the County of Forfar; and of the Spaniards at Glensbiel, so late as the Year 1719.

If we compare the Situation of Things at this Time, with that in the memorable Year 1745, the less Reason will be found for Distinction and

Partiality.

1

15 d

d

s,

c

or

to

.

n

ut

nd

ft m At that Time Britain was in the fifth Year of a destructive War against France and Spain; at this

^{*} See Secretary Murray's Deposition in Lord Lovar's Trial,

"Peace, and Prosperity of this Kingdom." If the Government really thinks an Invasion practicable, pray what Safety can there be while near one Half of the United Kingdom is left exposed; and what Peace or Prosperity can be expected, where Cause of Murmuring is given, and partial Destinctions are made?

The Security of England from an Invasion by Foreigners, was what the Government proposed by establishing a Militia but how South-Britain can be secured, while North-Britain is left open, is a Mystery to me: If indeed the former was separated from the latter by a Channel, as Ireland is from Great-Britain, or by a Strait, as Zealand is from Schonen by the Sound; or if a navigable River run between them, as the Wefer does between Westphalia and Hanover, or as the Thames flows between Middlefex and Surry, Effex and Kent; or even as the Humber divides Lincolnshire from Yorkshire, the Mystery would disappear; but the Case is otherwise; for tho' the Tweed divides South and North-Britain at Berwick, and the Efk separates the two Nations at Solway Firth, yet there are many Parishes, many great Estates, nay whole Counties, that lie on the South Side of the Tweed, belonging to Scotland, which for many Miles is as close to England as Kent is to Surry, Surry to Hampshire, or Kent is to Sussex; fo that in many Places a hundred thousand Men can march out of the one into the other, without the least natural Obstruction: 'Tis true Scotland does not lie so near France as the extended Coast from

from Dover to the Land's End; but then the Scots Shore is more contiguous to Denmark and Sweden, and confequently more liable to an Invafion from the Swedes and Russians, who are now the Allies of our natural Enemy; and it is observable that when J. Murray of Broughton went to Paris in the Year 1742, with a Copy of the Affociation for bringing in the Pretender, the old Cardinal Fleary proposed that the Invasion, in Fayour of the Scheme, should be made by a Body of Swedes; for, as these are a Protestant People, faid his Eminence, they are more likely to give lefs Offence to the British Nation than a Body of Catholics are *. Add to this, the English Coast is defended by many Forts and Garrisons; whereas on the Scottish Coast there is not a Fort of any Strength or Consequence, except Fort George at Arderseir; nor is an Invasion from Foreigners intirely chimerical; witness the dreadful Defeat of the Norwegians at Largs, in the Shire of Renfrew; of the Danes at Kinloss, in the Shire of Murray; at Lancartie, in Perthsbire; at Kingborn, in the County of Fife; at Aberlemno, in the County of Forfar; and of the Spaniards at Glenshiel, so late as the Year 1719.

If we compare the Situation of Things at this Time, with that in the memorable Year 1745, the less Reason will be found for Distinction and

Partiality.

d

C

d

d

S,

le

or

to ۲;

en

ut

nd

ft m At that Time Britain was in the fifth Year of a destructive War against France and Spain; at this

^{*} See Secretary Murray's Deposition in Lord Lovat's Trial.

this Time she is in the fifth Year of a War fingly against France; but then she supports one of the German Princes against two Empires, affisted by the Swedes; the pays double the Subfidies of what the paid then; and the Expence of supporting an Army under Prince Ferdinand is much greater than at any Period of the last War, or even that of Queen Anne: The Taxes are higher; her Acquifitions upon the Continent of America are even a Burthen to her; for it will take some Time to bind up the Wounds of Canada, and our other Conquests; whereas France has none to maintain: and it is well observed by an ingenious Author, France was lukewarm with regard to Canada *; which certainly must be a Drawback upon her, when involved in a German War.

On the other Hand, though the Court of Verfailler seems, from a general Review of her Conduct, to have been infatuated in her Councils; yet, upon considering the Matter seriously, her Case, at this Time, will not appear so very much worse than in the memorable Year 1745, as to admit the Denial of a Militia to Scotland, to be just; equitable, or expedient; for four Years together she had, till the Battle of Fontenoy, been wisted with the Frowns of Adversity, and involved in an intolerable Expence: The Elector of Bavaria, known by the Name of Charles VII. when quite stripped of his Dominions, was mantained in all the Splendour of an Emperor by

ſi

re

W

to

th

of

wa

thi

lan

fch Br

^{*} Remarks on the Letter to two Great Men; published by J. and R. Dodfley.

Lewis XV. whose Coffers were likewise emptied. in order to support his Candidate for the Crown of Sweden, and to bring about a Revolution at Petersburgh: He likewise kept up vast Armies both in Germany and in Bohemia, not to mention those in Italy and Provence: His Army in Bobemia was so ruined, that of an hundred thousand Men, one fifth Part of which was Cavalry, only thirty thousand escaped from Prague, in a shattered Condition, under the Marshal Belliste; another shared the same Fate under M. Broglio. whose Skill and Address in making the Germans murder each other was not unknown to his Constituents; nor was the Army under M. de Noailles in a better Condition: The Defeat of his Troops at Dettingen brought on a Chain of Difasters, which obliged the French Army to repais the Rhine: Nor were their Misfortunes in Italy small; and it is observable that the Advantages reaped by France in Flanders, even after the Battle of Fontenoy, were always ballanced by fome Loss or other fustained by her Troops who were acting against the King of Sardinia: Add to all this, that her Fleet, in Conjunction with that of Spain, was beat near Toulon on the 11th of February, 1744. In a Word her Treasury was drained, and her Armies dwindled into Nothing by the Sword, by Famine, and other Calamities; and yet, under these Misfortunes, she schemed the Project of making a Diversion in Britain by Means of the young Chevalier.

۲,

r-

1-

5;

er

ch

to

be

to-

in-

of

III.

an-

by

ewis

ished

At this Time her Allies are more numerous and powerful than in the last War, while our Ally feems to be oppressed by his Enemies; the frequent Repulses of our Troops in Germany, with the Devastation occasioned by the Change of Climate, and other fatal Circumstances, are little less in their Consequences than those subsequent on the Battle of Fontenoy. Many malignant Subjects, both from Britain and Ireland, are in the Service of France, while many Subjects of that Crown are kindly entertained in Britain; and no doubt, like these in the last Rebellion. are ready to espouse the Cause of their grand Monarch: A Pretender to the Crown may easily be had. The History of England abounds with Pretenders, and no less than two have appeared in Sweden fince the Death of Charles XII; another Perth may appear; another Kilmarnock may be deluded; as may a Morgan, a Townley, a Fletcher; and a Blood? Nor can we doubt but Men of diffolute Lives, and desperate Fortunes, may be found. It is not incredible, that the French Ministry are equally solicitous to disturb the inward Repose of Great Britain, as a little before that Period, when the young Chevalier, attended by the Duke of Richlien, and M. Saxe, put to Sea with a formidable Armament from Dunkirk, and proceeded till within Sight of his native: Country, as M. Voltaire phrases it *, when he was driven back by a Storm; and all this was done before the Fifteenth of February, 1744, when his Majesty ordered the Information to be laid before the Parliament.

be

See the Age of Louis XIV. Vol. 1.

The Marine of France is not annihilated: She has many Ships of Force, one of whom the Royal Lewis of 116 Guns, and the Prothée of 64; which last has by taking the Ajax East-Indiaman, a Ship worth 400000 l. delivered M. Bussy, and his immense Treasures, from the English, and enabled the French to carry on the War. Nay her Privateers have made such Havock of our Merchantmen both in Europe and America, that one would be apt to think the Masters of these were in good Terms with the Enemy.

h

of

le

nt

nt

re-

af

7;

0,

0-

be

e-

in .

es

be

"

if-

be

li-

rd

nat

by:

Sea

rk,

ve:

he

vas

one

.

But are not North Britons the King's Subjects? Have they not a Right to defend their Country against foreign and domestic Enemies? The Diftinction of Lowlanders and Highlanders has been laid afide: The Antipathy between these has been hurled away by an unparalled Zeal for promoting the Glory of their King. The one Half of the Highland Regiment has through the Course of the War been composed of Men from the Lowlands of Scotland; and from these Parts are upwards of Seventy Thousand Men in the Service of the Government; And no less than Thirty Thousand have been raised within these five Years; two Thirds of whom have been killed in Battle and by the Change of Climate. And if the Scots Nation discover such true Magnanimity as to incorporate one with Forefathers and unite with Men between whose Forefathers and their own a Hatred existed in all its Rancour, why should the Legislature discourage the happy Junction by making national Distinctions? Is there a County in Scotland whose Free-holders have not taken the Oaths to the Government? A Borough whose Magistrates have not done the same? And can any Man endowed with the least Generosity of Sentiment think that the Whole defire Arms to rebel?

Tho' the Insurrections against their Majesties King George I. and II. of glorious Memory begun in Scotland, yet these were so much opposed by North Britons in general, that with Propriety they may be called the Suppressors of both; for abstracting from the Militia raised in different Parts of the Country, did not the Glafgow Battalion guard the Passage of the Forth on the Day of the Action at Dumblain? Did not the principal Nobility attend Jahn Duke of Argyle as Volunteers? The Dukes of Douglass and Roxburgh, the Earls of Rathes, Leven, Haddingtoun, and Loudon charged at the Head of the Cavalry, the Earl of Iflay received two Wounds, and Archibald Douglass Earl of Forfar twentyfour.

The above Earl of Islay died Duke of Argyle, April 15, 1761, aged 79; and here it will not

n

27

TC

an

be improper to draw a Character of him.

The high Station of Justice-General of Scotland and Keeper of the Great Seal there, with a numerous Train of Places and Dignities, did not fo much Honour to him, as they derived Lustre from him: And tho' he was adorned with all the Crowns that Glory itself could fix upon the Head of a Subject, yet these and the Confidence reposed in him by four successive Sovereigns, did not so much enoble him as his own Merit and personal Accomplishments, which rendered him a compleat Judge both of Men and of Things. He could write a Letter in eight different Languages; he understood Botany, Chemistry, and all the Practice of Physic; the ingenious Construction of Watches and Clocks, nay of all the Machines depending upon Mechanism; with all the Branches of the Mathematics, of natural and moral Philosophy: He had digested the Laws of his Country, and could speak upon them with a majestic and distinguishing Sedateness; a charming and irrefistible Eloquence! He was a stedfast Friend, no cruel Enemy; and, abstracting from the Scheme of raising the Independant Highland Companies in Scotland, and promoting the Manufactories and Fisheries thro' the King's Dominions, by which Millions had Bread, he at a moderate Computation settled Fifty-four Thousand Individuals in civil and military Employments: A Man, like Cæfar, chief in Peace and War! While at the School of Inverara and University of Glasgow he was no less remarkable for a prodigious Strength of Body, and a furprizing Agility, than admired in the Senate and in the Privy Council, when Actions bis Words, and Words his Actions grac'd. 4. He

d

3

2-

w

ne

ne vle

x-

771

y,

ba y-

le-

tor

Ot-

re,

did

He tho' from Heaven remote to Heaven did move, With Strength of Mind, and trode the Abys Above: Well pleas'd was be to walk along the Sphere Of rolling Stars, and travel with the Year. With more than buman Skill be scal' d the Height Of Atlas, who suftain'd the Heav'nly Weight; And now his condescending Eyes survey Nistaken Mortals wandring from the Way,

But, to return:

Did not a Party of the well-affected Militia affift General Wightman in defeating the Spamiards at the Battle of Glensbiel, Anno 1710 : And whoever confults the Lifts of the killed and wounded during the last Rebellion, will find that the Lofs in every Battle fell chiefly upon the Scots in the King's Service.

From all which Confiderations not only the Inhabitants of North Briton but even those of her Isles ought to be entrusted with Arms; and the rather, as the Isles of Zetland and Orkney, which about three Centuries ago were equally despised by the Courts of Denmark and Scotland, are now found to produce as teaming a Vintage as the verdant Banks of the Thames,

To Arthur Nicholfon of Lochend, and Magnus Henderson of Gardie was owing the wonderful Discovery; the former of whom had as extenfive a Genius for Trade as any Merchant in Europe, and the latter, abstracting from a majestic Comeline's of Person, which even distinguished him among the Great, possessed the more refined.

Accomplishments

W

th

Accomplishments of the Understanding; his Skill in the French and Italian Languages, his Alertness at the Dutch, the Swedish and German Tongues, did not so much enoble him as a Goodness of Heart, which never look'd upon the Poor without Feeling for them! the Relief of those who were starving amidst the most exuberant Plenty, more than any personal Interest, prompted him to enquire into all the Articles that might promote the Herring, the Cod, the Ling and the Tusk Fisheries:

lia

a-

2 nd

be

ac

he

of

nd

ot-

aus

ful

n-

14-

ftic

ned

ned.

nts

These amiable Gentlemen begun with sending a few Lasts of Fish to Hamburgh, and in Time shipped off several Vessels with Fish and Oil to the Markets of Italy, and all the Hanse Towns. A Politeness and Generosity to Strangers drew many to fettle in these remote Places: Their punctual Payments rendered their Bills incontestable upon every Exchange, while their Kindness, which was always fincere, procured them an universal Applause: And to crown all, William Henderson, Father of Magnus, built a Church at his own Charge, and left a Fund for supporting a Minister: Many Houses are erected thro' the Island in the most elegant Taste; and adorned with the richest Furniture; but all these have in their Turn shared the Calamities of War, for want of Arms, and the Countenance of Government. Here the French land, and with Impunity, strip Men, Women and Children: Their Privateers ride in Safety to wait the Arrival of our Ships, from the East-Indies, and from Greenland.

Can it be supposed that Frederick Prince of Wales patronized the British Fishery with no other View but to enrich the London Merchants. who, for want of due Attention, have fuffered the fame to decay *? No! His Royal Heart intended that the Good should be general, and that those in the remote Parts should be encouraged to purfue the Advantages which Nature has pointed out: But granting that the Aggrandizement of the London Merchants was folely in his Eye; vet how can the End be answered without encourage ing fuch as live upon the Spot? This is too plain to be infifted on; and yet not unworthy the Conderation of our illustrious King, who is descended from King Robert Bruce, whose Diffrestes. Dangers, Victories and Triumphs bear so near a Resemblance to those of Gustavus Erickson; he bears a Name that was always propitions for England; he will, like those of his Royal Anceftors, who were the Third of a Name, study the Welfare and Happiness of his People; he will fecure his Throne upon the firm Bafis of Love and Affection, to the utter Confusion of those, who, by their Advice to deny Arms to the Scots Nation, would fow the Seeds of Distrust between a BRITISH SOVEREIGN and BRITISH SUBJECTS. O the barnet area? moderni and agent

Wet, for west of Ames, and the Countenance of the Formatte and the state of the sta

The read of the said of the sa

^{*} The Dutch by this Fyhery gain One Million Sterling yearly.